

THE UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH

Could you and your baby help with pregnancy research?

Congratulations on your pregnancy!

Taking part in research during your pregnancy could help to improve outcomes and experiences for future parents and babies.

NHS Lothian works in close partnership with the University of Edinburgh to promote research within its maternity services.

You may be invited to take part in research during your pregnancy.

Participation in any research study is voluntary and will not affect your usual maternity care in any way.

If you choose to participate, a member of the research team will discuss a study in detail with you before you agree to take part. You are free to leave studies at any time.

Any questions? Please contact the Research Midwives:

0131 242 2480

loth.researchmidwives@nhs.scot

Scan to explore our current studies or visit:
<https://edin.ac/3XLL0Ke>