

What to expect after your biopsy

Information for patients

We understand that having a biopsy can be a stressful experience, and we want to ensure you feel supported and well informed throughout the process.

After your biopsy, it is normal for there to be a period of waiting while the results are being processed and reviewed. During this time, you may be asked to attend additional scans or appointments. When attending for your biopsy results you may be asked to stay a little longer to have further assessments carried out.

These follow up investigations help your medical team gather all the necessary information to provide you with the most accurate diagnosis and to plan the best possible care.

If you have any questions or feel unsure about any upcoming appointments, please don't hesitate to contact us. We are here to support you in every step of the way.
